OLD SERIES--VOL. XXV.

LOUISVILLE, MONDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 25, 1869.

NEW SERIES--VOL. I. NO. 169.

THE CITY.

Personal.
General A. S. Burnett, of New Albany, accompanied by his two daughters, beautiful and accomplished, will leave tomorrow for a trip to California. They go via Panama.

Lunatic.
Officer Wm. Sinkhorn last evening arrested on the street, and conveyed to the City-street station, Caroline Fetter, believed to be a lunatic. Her case will come up this morning.

Edward Peynado & Co., are the sole direct importers of Havana cigars in Louisville, Ky.

Another Project.
A meeting to organize a company to build the Toledo and Louisville railroad, a line projected from North Vernon via Greensburg and Rushville to Newcastle, will be held in Indianapolis on the 29th.

L. O. O. F.
The Grand Lodge of the State of Kentucky, L. O. O. F., will convene in annual session in this city tomorrow morning, in Odd-Fellows' Hall, beginning their sessions at 9 a. m. The Grand Encampment will assemble on Wednesday at 2 p. m.

Railroad Meeting.
Some of the citizens of Garrard county, Kentucky, held a meeting to-day to consider the best means of bringing about, at an early day, a vote by the people of that county for a subscription to the stock of the Louisville, Harrodsburg and Virginia railroad.

Bad Whisky.
There must have been considerable bad whisky consumed in town yesterday, judging from the number of quarrels and fights, and the number of fellows observed who were a little too sick of their stomach to carry it off. Perhaps the sudden snap of cold weather induced some to warm themselves up, who had not accustomed their stomachs to the taste, and they got too much of a load.

Louisville Opera House.
John Owens closed his engagement Saturday night, to a splendid audience, and there were hundreds who desired his engagement to be renewed, but he will come back some of these days. To-night we are promised that fine comedy of Laura Keane's—Our American Cousin—with an excellent cast, a comedy that has some extremely fine points, and this will be followed by the farce, Too Much for Good Nature.

Wednesday night Brignoli, the great tenor, with his operatic troupe, will begin an engagement, and the lovers of music may prepare themselves for something very fine.

Church Matters.
Bireloop Simpson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church (northern branch), was in the city yesterday, and preached to crowded houses, morning and night, at the Market-street Church.

Reverend Dr. Thomas Price and Reverend R. M. Henry, have arrived in the city as a deputation from the "British and Irish Home Mission," and they will address Christians of all denominations tomorrow night, at the Walnut-street Baptist Church.

Wallace's Grates.
John Wallace is a mechanic—a practical man. He has studied the science of building chimneys and flues, has experimented largely and invented a grate and a way of setting, which, there is no doubt, is almost invaluable. One of Wallace's grates, set in his way, will throw out more heat with a given amount of coal than other grates with three times the amount; therefore, his grate is a great economizer, as well as heater, and, as the cold season is on us, every one who can should have his rooms fitted with the Wallace grate. Call at 111 Third street, and see samples.

The best cigars in the market can be had at Edward Peynado & Co.'s, Galt House stand.

The Sensation Minstrels.
Who does not remember the houses which last season filled Weisiger Hall to enjoy the entertainments of the Emerson, Allen and Manning Minstrels; and who does not remember that Johnny Allen was, to a large extent, the life and soul of the troupe? To-night we are to have, in the same hall, Johnny Allen with his new combination, known as Allen, Pettengill, DeLanty and Hengler's Minstrels. It has been so long since a good troupe was here, and the people have of late had so much burlesque on the stage, and so much serious consideration off, that this taste of minstrelsy comes in good time. Of course the house will be filled.

The First Ice.
The city woke up yesterday morning to find its roofs and its sidewalks covered with a heavy frost—to find its gutters frozen over with ice at least one-eighth of an inch thick. Nor was that all; for, though the sun came up clear and bright, and remained unclouded all the day, the ice remained unmelted on the south side of the streets, and a cold wind prevailed, driving pleasure-seekers within doors. Such a heavy fall of leaves and twigs was never noticed before as the result of one night's frost. Some of the streets were filled full, so as to impede locomotion. And now look out for Indian summer, that beautiful season of the year when the air is cool, yet balmy, when the forests exchange their coat of green for a buff and dun, and the hill-sides shall be covered in a coat of many colors—when the boys and squirrels go a nutting and the ducks begin to prepare for the winter so near at hand.

THREE-CARD MONTE.

OPERATORS ON THE TRAIN.

Flare-Up, Shooting, Escape, Capture.

For at least two months past the various trains leaving and arriving at this point have been infested by a gang of sharpers, who ply their games upon the unwary or unskillful, but they have been so sly previous to this as not to have fallen into the hands of the police. But the season of impunity has about passed by. They have had free swing about as long as could be expected, and now comes a change.

Mr. Thos. McDaniel is a farmer of Owen county, pretty well to do in the world, who among other of his crops this year, raised considerable tobacco. This tobacco he shipped to the city and sold, and on Saturday morning, with his money in his pocket, he started for home on the 9:30 Cincinnati train. On the train were three fellows, well-dressed and very gentlemanly in their manners. These three, in their own peculiar way, satisfied themselves that McDaniel had money, and they also determined to have some of it. They therefore approached him, and in a short time gained his attention to a game they called "Humpty-Dumpty"—nothing else than three-card monte; and before he was aware what he was about, they had beat him out of about one hundred dollars. But the loss of so much money opened his eyes to the fact that he was but a dupe in their hands; and, when perfectly satisfied of that fact, he not only quit the game, but called the attention of the passengers in the car to the fact that the three men were sharpers, or gamblers; that they had cheated him out of his money. At this announcement the three broke for the door, and without waiting to consult the conductor as to letting them off right in the woods, they gave a jump, with the train in full motion. Windows in the car were hastily thrown up, passengers rushed to look after the reckless trio, and some four or six shots were sent towards them. This occurred but a short distance this side of Lagrange.

On arrival of the train at that station, Mr. McDaniel left, and wandering around the village for awhile, finally footed his way two or three miles up the short-line railroad, met and signaled the down train, entered and landed in the city again at forty-five minutes past eleven o'clock. He proceeded at once to give information to the police and ask advice. After taking advice and arming himself, he left again on the half-past two o'clock train. How far up he went is not known, but he returned on the night train from Lexington. On the same train he found one of the two, and kept his eye on him. At the head of Jefferson street the sharper got off the train and started on foot down street. McDaniel saw him and left the train; in doing so, however, he discharged one barrel of his pistol accidentally, the ball grazing his right leg above the knee, drawing a little blood, but not enough to make him feel it. It was now dark, but as the lamps were lighted he pushed on rapidly after his man. At Clay street he rushed over to the station-house and announced that he had treed one of the parties. Officers Daily, Denniger and Johnson left the station with him, and, following the trail as quickly as possible, landed in the saloon at the corner of Green and Hancock almost as soon as the pursued. Here he was arrested, being identified by McDaniel as one of the two. On being arrested he gave his name as George H. Duvall, is said to be from New Orleans. He was taken to the station-house, but, sending for some friends, gave bail to appear this morning in the City Court and answer to any charge that may be brought against him. The chase was a long one, and full of excitement, but Mr. McDaniel was equal to the task he set for himself. The case will no doubt excite considerable interest in court this morning.

A Musical Sensation.

From the London papers we see that the introduction of the S. D. & H. W. Smith's American organ has created quite a sensation in musical circles of that city. The large establishment of Broadwing & Co. have secured the agency from the Messrs. Smith, and the sale has been so large that the manufacturers have been unable to supply the numbers required. The English have heretofore prided themselves upon the superiority of their musical instruments, especially upon the organs and pianos; hence the introduction and so large a sale of the instruments, is another American triumph. Chickering & Sons, after having received a gold medal at the Crystal Palace World's Fair, in London, established an agency there for their pianos. Since then, Cramer & Co. obtained the Steinway agency, and the result was that in the late Paris Exposition, the pianos of the American manufacturers took the first premium over all the European makers, and the demand for their make in Louisville is said to be larger than in any city of its size in the United States, showing the high order of musical talent of our people. Mr. Faulds having been their representative in this city since 1854, has sold very largely of them throughout the South.

Wastell's New Dances.

Mr. J. B. Wastell, the popular professor of dancing, is just in receipt of two new dances from London, viz: the Belgravia Waltz and the Belgian Quadrille, which is all the rage in that city. They are the composition of the celebrated Dan Godfrey, of the Cold Stream Guards. Several of his compositions have met with immense success, and all are popular. These are spoken of by the English press as very beautiful. Mr. Wastell will introduce them to his pupils at Odd Fellows' Hall.

A Romance.

A few days ago Major Butler, who has charge of the recruiting office for the United States army, was sitting in his office on Third street, between Green and Walnut streets, when a genteel, well-dressed man entered and said that he wanted to enlist. He bore every appearance of being not only a gentleman, but a man of high culture, of good education, of fine attainments. His language was chaste, even elegant; his manner modest, yet earnest; his carriage dignified, yet easy; his voice well modulated. To all outward appearance he was one who had been moving in the best society. That some great sorrow had overtaken him—some overpowering affliction had visited him, appeared highly probable. He had a tale to tell, and was anxious to do so, as if fearing that should he not do so, and his history be made known in some other way, he should lose caste; but Major Butler told him it was quite unnecessary; that all the service asked was that he should be able to pass an examination. But it was noticed by those who examined him that on one of his arms were tattooed certain letters, and those letters, no doubt, spelled his real name. We can only reveal the fact that the name began thus: "Reverend"—Who is he? What is he? Whence does he come? What great blackness of darkness has driven him from the army of the church into the army of the world? Will these questions find an answer this side of eternity?

A BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.
The Sights.
The benevolent young men of the city are constantly taxing their brains to devise new schemes of excellence—new methods of conferring favors, on the unfortunate—and the last idea has shaped itself into the form of a society called "The Sights." The object of the association is to gather around the markets where ladies are numerous, or on street-corners, where the crossings are muddy, or the winds sweep through the streets and disarrange female apparel. They take to themselves and give to each other great loads of enjoyment in detailing the number and size and general appearance of calves which their keen optics have rescued from the embrace of the rude winds, or the crush of market-houses, or the steep ascent of churches. And rarely do they enjoy this truly benevolent labor. They have no mothers nor sisters at home on whom to lavish their extravagant great-heartedness. In this they are most unfortunate, and consequently they console themselves in the holy work of devoting all the energies of their eyes to the mothers and sisters of other young men. At a future time we may give another sketch. Suffice it for the present to say to these "Sights"—"A chief's among ye, takin' notes, and faith he'll print 'em."

TOWN TOPICS.

Oysters, Game, &c.

Phil. Loich's St. Charles Hotel larder, corner of Seventh and Main, is supplied with oysters, game, mushrooms and all other luxuries. Hotel on the European plan, with excellent rooms.

Big Sale.

The extensive real estate sale of Morris, Southwick & Co., advertised for the 21st and postponed until to-day, the 25th inst., is creating more interest than any of their former great sales—principally because of the immediate availability of the property offered.

The Place for Pictures.

Is at Elrod's gallery, Main street. The oldest gallery and the artist longest in the profession in Louisville.

Real Estate Market for 1869.

The prospects of the real estate trade for the remainder of the year, judged by the indications presented on every hand, are exceedingly good, and if they are only partially realized 1869 will be rendered memorable for the extent of its real estate sales. Thus far the sales in this vicinity of city and suburban property have been enormous, the favorite investments being vacant lots—an indication of health and prospective growth in the highest degree encouraging.

Fighting and Quarrelling.

There was a greater disposition yesterday toward quarrelling and fighting than has been observed for a long time, consequently, no doubt, on the amount of whisky consumed.

A Lot of Men went about five o'clock into the coffee-house or tavern, whichever it is, on the northeast corner of Floyd and Jefferson streets, and got into a little squabble with the bar-keeper, in the course of which one of them received a scratched eye. A woman of the house ran to First street for an officer, but by the time he arrived they had gone.

William McMullen and Joseph McClure were arrested by Officers Jamison and White for fighting near the corner of Preston and Jefferson streets, about the same hour. They were locked up in the First-street station.

A sort of free fight between some whites and negroes is said to have occurred on Hancock street, near Green, but as no arrests were made, particulars could not be obtained.

LOU., CIN. AND LEX. R. R.

Earnings for Quarter to September 30th, 1869.

We are indebted to the kindness of Mr. William Mahl, auditor of the company, for the following statement, showing the earnings of the Louisville, Cincinnati and Lexington railroad for the three months ending September 30th, 1869, and the corresponding period in 1868, as follows:

1869.	1868.
Passengers.....	$14,437 53
Freight.....	22,922 02
Express.....	7,182 88
Mail.....	2,530 00
Total.....	$47,072 43
Less.....	128,570 80
Income.....	$117,002 27

This statement shows a prosperous and rapidly increasing business, the total income being equal to 92 1/2 per cent. It is true the short line branch was opened during this quarter, and but very little trade was done on that line during the first six weeks. No through freights were carried at all until after July 20th. It is also true that the business of that branch is yet in its infancy. By the end of another quarter the local trade all along the line will have grown wonderfully, and the returns will show a very gratifying increase. The short line road is the best new road in the country.

Poor Fellow.

Between 3 and 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a crowd of children, with three or four men, gathered around a poor fellow on Market street, between Preston and Jackson. He was not meanly clad, yet not warmly enough for so cold a day. He carried his hat in his hand, and was unable to tell exactly what he wanted or where he wished to go. It was not possible from his wandering remarks to tell what was his name, his home or his destination. He wanted to find the priest. When asked what priest he replied, the "tall man with long gown and big cross; he got my papers." Then he began fumbling in his vest, or in the pocket of his check shirt, and cried out, "I lost my cross—I lost my cross. Ah me," he said, "my head no good. I been shot in de shoulder and in de head—my head no good; my heart good; do. Good man down here give me bed last night—I not know his name; ah, me." He was finally led away on the road to St. Boniface church by some of the compassionate bystanders, in the hope he might find the priest for whom he was looking.

Abuse of Family—Half Crazy.

Officers Slater and Thornton arrested John Fogle Saturday night and locked him up in the Green-street station-house, for being drunk and abusing his family. Yesterday morning his wife visited the station, accompanied by her little daughter, wanting to see him. She had no complaint—not she. John was a very good husband and father, but he has been unfortunate. He is not always in his right mind. He was sent to the asylum at Lexington some time ago; staid there three months, and was discharged; but he is not altogether right yet. When he gets a drop of the crutch he takes him off his balance. John had, however, been forwarded to the jail, and she could not see him.

Twenty-five Dollars.

Officers Harmon and Black arrested last evening a man named John Hoffman, and lodged him in jail. Everybody knows how cold it was yesterday, and there is no doubt John knew it too. It is to be supposed he felt the chill winds, and that his preparations for such an early winter had not been sufficient; it is also supposed that as he had no money to spare, Theodore Gross ought to let him have a suit of clothes without paying for them. Be that as it may, he did obtain the clothes, and he did not pay, hence his arrest.

Golladay's Drawing.

There was another drawing of Golladay's lottery at Hopkinsville, Ky., on Saturday. The following special dispatch gives a list of thirty drawn numbers in the order of their drawing:

THE GOLD GAMBLERS.

WHERE FISK, JR., RESIDES, AND HOW HE LIVES.

From the N. Y. Evening Post, Friday.

The three suits of Orlando W. Joslyn against Fisk, Jr., and others, on which attachments were levied on the Grand Opera House for an aggregate of $522,450, on the ground of Mr. Fisk's non-residence, came up before Judge Daly to-day, in the Common Pleas Special Term. Fisk moves to set aside these attachments on affidavits of John F. Cole and P. Goodrich, who swear that they know Mr. Fisk, that he lives at 313 West Twenty-third street, and has lived there continuously from the latter part of May last, and during that time has never been absent from the city more than four nights consecutively, and on that occasion he went on a visit to the city of Albany. That he owns real estate in the city to the value of $500,000, and all his business is in this city.

Mr. Fisk himself swears that prior to the month of May last he was a resident and citizen of Massachusetts, and had no settled home or domicile in this State; but during the summer he resided at his constant attendance here, took up his permanent residence in this city, and now lives at No. 313 West Twenty-third street. He says he is in every respect a citizen and resident of this State and a freeholder to a large amount, greatly exceeding the amount of the claims against him, in which he has made the change of residence in good faith, with intent that it shall be permanent before the transactions on which these attachments are founded; that he has had no transactions with the plaintiff, and has no idea of the nature of the action, and is confident there is no claim against him.

Mr. Dudley Field, in opening for the defendant, said that the summons in this suit was for relief, but the complaint had not been served. From the affidavit on which the attachment was granted, he found that it was for differences on gold purchases made by Speyer.

To Judge Daly's inquiry as to whether Mr. Fisk's family were living in this city, Mr. Field stated that he was separated from his wife and had no children. In reply, Mr. James C. Spencer read an affidavit of Mr. Metcalf, reading several suits and proceedings, among the rest his complaint against Fisk, in which he sets up his Boston residence. His affidavit in the latter case was made as
